COURSE OVERVIEW

A comprehensive course that equips managers and workers alike with the tools to build a unified safety culture.

Strong safety performance needs leaders who set clear expectations and workers who put safe practice into action. The course covers the legal foundations and OSHA training requirements, safety roles and responsibilities, developing an effective training program, instructional design and delivery methods.

Participants also cover core safety topics for all workers, task-specific and hazard-based training, supervisor and manager training, evaluating effectiveness, documentation, building culture through training and future regulatory considerations. Graduates are equipped to plan and deliver training at every level.
