COURSE OVERVIEW

An advanced, comprehensive program that develops broad, integrated occupational safety and health competence for professionals who support, manage and advise on safety systems in general industry.

The program addresses complex safety risks, management systems, hazard control strategies, health protection and organizational safety leadership across a wide range of industrial operations. Advanced scenarios cover hazard identification and risk management, energy control, electrical safety, confined spaces, ergonomics program management, industrial hygiene, emergency preparedness, workplace violence prevention and fleet safety.

Aligned with OSHA 29 CFR 1910 at a professional practice level, the program reinforces the role of safety management systems, leadership, training delivery and continuous improvement in sustainable safety performance. Graduates are equipped to integrate safety systems, evaluate performance data and lead workforce engagement across their organization.
