COURSE OVERVIEW

> A comprehensive professional certification that prepares safety practitioners, supervisors and managers for operational leadership in occupational health and safety.

The program applies safety management principles across construction and general industry, with emphasis on hazard control, regulatory compliance, workforce training and incident prevention. Participants learn to manage high-risk activities, conduct job hazard analyses, coordinate emergency preparedness, lead safety committees and oversee fall protection, confined spaces, materials handling and electrical safety from a managerial perspective.

Bridging frontline supervision and strategic leadership, the RHSM equips managers with practical tools for training workers, coordinating contractors, managing incidents and continuously improving safety outcomes. Completion signifies a high level of competence in applied safety management across multiple worksites and departments.
