COURSE OVERVIEW

A specialized certification that develops qualified safety trainers for one of the world's highest-risk sectors.

Construction projects combine heavy machinery, elevated work, hazardous materials and fast-paced schedules. This program prepares professionals to translate OSHA construction requirements and industry best practice into clear, practical guidance for crews on the ground, designing and delivering site-specific training on falls, electrical risks, scaffolding, excavations and equipment operation. Adult learning strategies and hands-on methods ensure workers apply safety protocols consistently.

Graduates are recognized as both safety practitioners and professional educators, a dual competency that enhances employability and opens pathways into construction safety management. With a focus on real-world scenarios, the program equips trainers to influence behavior, reduce incidents and build resilient safety cultures on active worksites.
